A Rough Time

By Dr. R. Pletsch

The last few years, we have seen a drastic change in how the youth are acting in and out of school. While the results have not been easy for many to accept, how did we get here? I received a book for Christmas "The Coddling of the American Mind" by Greg Lukinnoff and Jonathan Haidt. Greg is a professor at New York University and is considered a First Amendment specialist. Jon is well published, a Social Psychologist authoring many articles and considers himself a cultural moral, researcher. This book is a good guide for anyone who would like to look at what they produced: A. the cause and B. ways to combat these individual items you might not agree with. You may understand or disagree with the activities. It has always been my hope to give our readers the information and materials not always read to help you make your own opinion on issues of the day. I hope that those of you who want to explore this book on your own without me editorializing. I, therefore, will use one of the methods my past pro-fessors used over the years. Take them to the water, but let them decide whether to drink

One of the exceptional parts of the book is, it possesses an extensive bibliography of references. This means they are giving other people's opinions about the various articles. If you will be reading this book to decide to receive the full picture, warning it is about 300 pages -- most academic books are not short.

A few chapter titles you might find interesting are: 1 The untruth of fragility: what doesn't kill you makes you weaker. 2. The untruth of emotional reasoning: always trust your feelings. and 3. The untruth of us versus them: life is a battle between good and evil people. I hope some of you decide to read this book and it can strengthen your mental capacity.

144 CPS Students Earn Associate Degree

Chicago Public Schools CEO Pedro Martinez, City Colleges of Chicago Chancellor Juan Salgado, DeVry University President and CEO Elise Awwad, recognized more than 800 Class of 2024 scholars who are graduating with a high school diploma, plus 15 or more transferable college credits. 144 graduates earned their associate degree, more than any previous class in CPS history. Approximately 5,900 CPS 2024 graduates will save an estimated $8 million in total college tuition costs through the District's early college partnerships, primarily with the City Colleges of Chicago where students earned more than 49,000 credits, but also with withDeVry University, Chicago State University, Clicago State University, Illinois Tech, Loyola University, Northeastern Illinois University, National Louis University, University of Chicago, and the University of Illinois Chicago.

The graduates received a ceremonial blue cord for earning 15 graduates or more college credits during their junior and senior years, the equivalent of one semester in college. Another 216 students earned a gold cord for achieving 30 credits or more. The 144 graduating seniors who earned an associate degree in addition to their high school diploma received a plaque commemorating their achievement, 94 of them wore the platinum cords from their CCC college graduation ceremony earlier this month.

CCC offers college courses to high school juniors and seniors free of through the Chicago Roadmap, a comprehensive partnership agreement.

The partnership continues to expand, offering students throughout the city the opportunity to advance academically beyond fulfilling their high school requirements. When comparing the demographics of the CPS graduating class to the demographics of the District's early college earners, promising trends are emerging for CPS Black students.

Nearly a third (32.3 percent) of our graduating seniors are Black, whereas 37.1 percent of milestone earners are Black, showing that access to programming helps students post more equitable outcomes. Across all early college partners, Latinx and Black students represented up to 80 percent of all early college credit achievement, with their strongest presence among the associate degree earners.

Early college courses are college-level general education and career and technical courses and can enhance a student's overall high school GPA. Dual credit courses are taught by CPS teachers at high school campuses and online at Virtual online at Virtual Academy with support to ensure lessons meet ccc standards. Dual enrollment courses are taught by CCC Faculty both online and in-person.

Other partners like the DeVry University Advantage make it possible for CPS students to earn an associate degree in information technology and networking with a specialization in network systems administration or an associate degree in business administration.
